It has been almost six years since the National Planning Commission, then led by former Finance Minister Trevor Manuel and deputised by a businessman and political activist by the name of Cyril Ramaphosa, presented their plan to the nation.

Almost everyone who took the time to read and analyse the National Development Plan agreed that it was the most far-reaching and ambitious plan to grow South Africa’s economy in the way that we all know it can. Six years later and we are almost one-third through the term of the NDP, which proposed significantly reduced unemployment, inequality and poverty by 2030. Part of the reason for the slow progress we have made up to date could be attributed to the misrule that we have seen in government for the past nine years.

But now that we have a new President, one who was part of drawing up the NDP, we are able to again focus on the work that needs to happen to rebuild South Africa’s economy. If we do not grow our economy, we will never be able to do all the other things that we should do as a nation.

Despite the lack of progress over the past six years, there have been people, some in government and some in the private sector, who have diligently gone about trying to improve the lives of the most vulnerable in our society.

The importance of the Vision 2030 Summit is to look at what has been done, in government and in the private sector, to advance the goals of the NDP. But we intend to do more than just acknowledge the work that has been done. We also seek to celebrate it.

The only way for South Africa to progress is if all of us play a role. Too often in the past, we have pointed fingers at each other and blamed each other when things have not gone well. Through this summit and awards we seek to move beyond that and find ways in which government and the private sector can work together for the greater good of our society.

In this year when we celebrate the centenary of Nelson Mandela, let us all reflect on what still needs to be done to take our country forward and the role that each of us can play in making it happen. Let us all heed the call of President Ramaphosa when he quotes the late great Hugh Masekela: “Thuma Mina (Send me)“.

Mr Tshediso Matona
Head of Secretariat at the National Planning Commission: “we first have to actually apply the plan before we can fail in applying it. It is only out of implementation that you learn and adjust”. He also stated that the NDP is not a plan for government, it is a plan for the country and everyone needs to play their role, both the public and private sector.

The Hon. Deputy Minister Andries Nel of COGTA.
Highlighted how skills, growth and transformation are critical to local government delivering on their mandates. He also spoke about how last month only COGTA had outlined a strategy to deal with the shortfalls of local government.

Bonang Mohale
CEO, Business Leadership SA gave a thought provoking speech, with a call to action that “it is time to change our lack of actionalising plans in South Africa”.

Sithembele Senti
Executive Multistakeholder Project, SITA spoke about how government’s plans to digitalise in an effort to maximise service delivery and ensure that everyone can have access and dialogue with government.

Sabine DallÓmo
CEO, Siemens highlighted that “it can be done”, when corporates aligns themselves with the country’s goals.

Ashwell Jenneker
Deputy Director-General: Marketing, Communication and Publishing, StatsSA stated that we are an evidence-based nation and we must know and understand the challenges facing us.
SOME OF THE SUMMIT HIGHLIGHTS

Siyabonga Gama
CEO of Transnet highlighted some of the challenges and shortfalls of the SOE but also looked at the way forward, a way to grow and be more inclusive. He said that international partnerships, disruptive technologies and innovation is required in order to work towards African growth and development.

Prof Renuka Vithal
Honorary Professor of Mathematics Education in the School of Education, University of the Witwatersrand spoke on the pertinent issue of mathematics education in our country, she highlighted how access to quality schools and basic tools such as calculators can play a role in the outcome of a student.

Sy Mamabolo
CEO, The Electoral Commission of South Africa stated that accountability is the cornerstone of our democracy and noted that the NDP aims to unify South Africans, encouraging us all to be involved in curating the future.
“The event was out of this world. It was a magnificent event and knowledge that I gained there cannot be found anywhere else. I would really like to attend and see such events taking place all over the country so that the ordinary people, public servants, business and labour can work together and partner in order to create South Africa that we want.”
Mr Andreas Motsoene
National Skills Authority (NSA)

“The event is informative especially the mix between private and public sector. The youth discussion is important as a drive to reduce unemployment.”
Seabelo Molefi

Channel Africa – Live Broadcast from Vision 2030 Summit: 20 – 21 June 2018

This week high powered delegates from the public and private sectors of business in Southern Africa, have come together at the Emperors Palace Hotel near South Africa’s International OR Tambo Airport to attend the Vision 2030 Summit.

The two-day event aims Reinforce private and public sector support for and commitment to the National Development Plan (NDP). To raise awareness and position the NDP as a South African plan and not merely a government plan, and to position South Africa as an investor-friendly country. To help unpack what is being discussed we have: Tshediso Matona, Head of Secretariat for South Africa’s National Planning Commission, Rashmia Ishmail-Saville, CEO for the Youth Employment Service Sabine Dall’Omo, CEO of Siemens in Southern and East Africa

By aligning our strategic business orientation alongside the #Vision2030 National Development Plan we align ourselves alongside the progress of South African society.

The spirit of the Vision 2030 is to make the #NDP accessible to all South Africans and to bring public- and private-sector stakeholders together in partnership to expedite the realisation of the NDP’s goals as well as to stimulate greater private-sector participation #Vision2030

Mr. Mogajane joined National Treasury in 1999 as Deputy Director and has worked in various areas including, among others, the Intergovernmental Relations, Provincial Budget Analysis and International Economic Relations divisions. Between 2007 and 2010, he represented South Africa at the Executive Board of the World Bank, as Senior Advisor for Africa Group 1 countries. Between 2010 and May 2014, Mr. Mogajane was appointed as the Chief of Staff in the Ministry of Finance and later, as acting Chief Operating Officer from May 2014 until May 2015. He was later appointed Deputy Director-General, responsible for the Public Finance division at National Treasury; a position he occupied from June 2015.

Julia Stuart

Julia Stuart, affectionately known as Jules, is a Sports Presenter on SuperSport, features on SuperSport Blitz as a Voice Over and has a sports column in the Daily Voice newspaper. She is not only a beauty; but has the brains to back it all up - with a degree in Film and Media from the University of Cape Town and Honours in media theory and practice.

Femi Koya Band

A story of migration resonates in this music, which creates a conscious dialogue between West African and South African sounds. This musical fusion demonstrates the path to a new and culturally integrated Africa in which a common heritage is reinforced to meet the needs of today’s world. Femi Koya’s quest is for African unity at a time when the continent should claim its rightful and proud place in the world. His music is evidence of the rich melodies that result from this fusion. Through his versatility on the saxophone, Femi Koya breathes new life into African world music. Celebrate Africa’s love of life with infectious dance numbers that life the soul and move the feet.
